

BEING CHIDI CHICK...

Reward.

Chidi and children like her will much prefer recognition over reward. Given that she naturally thrives in the limelight and relishes being the centre of attention, publicly rewarding Chidi for any efforts or achievement will mean more to her than any material goods or other rewards. Chidi and children like her will also like certificates, trophies or other tangible rewards and the more they are rewarded, they more likely they are to thrive in any given area.

Criticism.

Chidi Chick is very self aware and so will likely know when there is need for criticism. Chidi, and children like her will willingly apologise and will seek to make things right quickly. It is important that after criticising Chidi, or a child like her that you are able to 'wrap around' positive affirmations and engage in a friendly and social manner. Children like Chidi are likely to withdraw when criticised in a blunt or direct manner.

Play.

Chidi Chick loves to be around others. Wherever possible, she will enjoy being the leader, the entertainment and the centre of attention but she is able to bring groups of people together and engage them with high levels of empathy and charm. Chidi, and children like her, will find they are able to make fun whenever and wherever they have an audience. In independent play, children like Chidi will need the opportunity to showcase what they have achieved or tell stories/share their experiences with others in a show and tell fashion.

Communication.

Chidi Chick is an expert communicator and will be able to express herself freely. She will easily adapt her communication style to others and share her feelings openly. If you are speaking to Chidi or a child like her, you may struggle to them to really pay full attention. You may find that they are eager to talk and find they spend 'listening' time considering their response. Chidi and children like her are emotionally aware and very sharp - they may get things quickly so it's useful to deliver information in smaller, direct chunks that they are able to interact with. You will be able to engage children like Chidi with questioning, asking them to share their own experiences or insights and giving regular opportunities for feedback.

Support.

Chidi Chick and children like her firmly believe that a problem shared is a problem halved. They are likely to share their concerns or struggles with humor and may well communicate with a group rather than one to one basis. It will be important for Chidi and children like her to feel they can share any struggles they are having in a manner that keeps them in control and maintains their happy and sociable persona. Children like Chidi will like to support others and work through challenges or issues together. Giving them a role or a purpose in supporting others can be one of the easiest ways to ensure they receive the support they need and connecting them with people with similar challenges will be beneficial, too.

Chidi Chick is incredibly sociable. She is expressive, charming and can be very funny. She thrives when she is centre of attention, amusing other people and showcasing her ability to engage and entertain other people. Chidi isn't afraid of much and knows that she is a real 'people's person'. She is aware of her emotions and will talk about them to anyone that will listen.
